Classics and Women's Studies

Lecture and Awards Presentation

In memory of

Shilpa Raval
Class of '91

Shilpa Raval Memorial Prize in Classics.

Established by her family and friends in loving memory of Shilpa Raval (1969-2004), C'91, Ph.D. 1998 (Brown), assistant professor of Classics at Yale University and brilliant scholar. Awarded annually to a student who has pursued Classical Studies with distinction, enthusiasm, and scholarly promise.

Recipient: Linsy Ashburn

Raval Prize in Women's Studies and the Humanities.

Established by her family and friends in memory of Shilpa Raval (1969-2004), the prize is awarded annually to a junior or senior whose interdisciplinary work, like Shilpa's lively and innovative scholarship on gender and sexuality in the ancient world, connects women's studies with study in an area of the humanities, languages or literature. As an undergraduate at Drew, Shilpa studied English, classics and women's studies, receiving her B.A. in 1991. She subsequently received a Ph.D. in classics from Brown University and was an assistant professor of Classics at Yale, where she also directed the Yale Women Faculty Forum.

Recipient: Victoria Sollecito

Program

Welcome
Paolo Cucchi, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts

Presentation of Classics Award
John Muccigrosso

Presentation of Women's Studies Award
Wendy Kolmar

Lecture:
Vassiliki Panoussi
William and Mary
"Of Goddesses and Men:
Tragedy and Reconciliation in Vergil's Aeneid"

Reception